PHILATELISTS will be interested in the new postage stamps for Thessaly, which the Turkish Government has just caused to be circulated These stamps are of the value of five, two, and one plastre and of 20 and to paras, and to eager were collectors to possess the new stamps that on the third day following their introduction, those valued at five and two piastres were all bought up, and changed hands at eighteen shillings. The stamps of smaller value brought four shillings. The traders in these stamps were Turkish officers and Civil sesvants, who evidently thought it an opportunity for making money not to be thrown away.

MR J. A. WILSON, head of Messrs. Howell & Co., Hakodate, recently lodged a complaint against one Yoshimura Teunekichi, of Nemuro, in connection with the delivery of refined sulphur. A distraint was made in May this year on application to the Hakodate District Court, and a quantity of sulphur transported from Nemuro by the steamer Gemou Maru was selzed. But of the total amount so seized 819 bags are alleged to have belonged to Mr. Inagaki Taisu, of Nemuro. Mr. Inagaki applied to the A MANTLA man who misbehaved himself in the | Court to have his gords restored, but his application was rejected on the ground that it could not be received or adjudged by any Japanese Court. He protested, however, urging that as his application was presented in regard to a distraint conducted under an order of the Japanese judicial authorities, it did not properly fall within the scope of the treaties between Japan and England. With this in view, an appeal was made. The case is entirely unprecedented, and is a general subject of discussion in Hakedate,

> A STORY of domestic unhappiness was poured. into Captain Hastings' cars to-day by an interesting looking little China woman with a bandaged head and bound feet. She charged her husband with assault. Said husband is a tall hook-nosed Celestial fashioushly dressed and is employed by a German firm in Queen's Rord. The woman, through her tears, told how they had been married some 16 years, and now he was living away from her with some one else. She went to him yesterday and asked for a little money and also for one of his jackets that she might wash it. He threw a cup at her, Canton. cutting her head and then she'rushed in and landed a bump on his nose with her head. He denied the assault and said that she struck herself on the head with the cup. Capt. Hastings said he had heard that kind of story before and he bound defendant over to be of good behaviour for six months in the sum of $50, in default ten days. His Wosship also told defendant that he would find it pay him to live in peace and quiet ness with the woman for the next six months,

OBITUARY.

MASTER DAVID BELILIOS.

It is with deep regret that we have to chronicle the melancholy fact, that the plague has claimed yet another foreign wictim in the person of David Beillios, the second son of the Hon, E. R. Belilloz, C.M.G., who died from the disease at Kingsclere early this morning, aged 16 years. The deceased youth was attending at the Victoris English Schools, and some ten days back was attacked by what was at first considered to be ordinary malarial fever. A few days ago, however, plague symptoms made their appearance, and in spite of all that the medical faculty; of the Colony could do the plague claimed its

We tender our sincerest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Belilios in the'r sad bereavement, which is all the more shocking by reason of its coming upon them at a time when the plague was supposed to have almost if not quite died out.

THE REBELLION IN SOUTH CHINA.

. (From our own Correspondent) CANTON, July 7th.

After posting my report this afternoon obtained further information respecting th movements of the rebels and at once wired it to Hongkong. It is to the effect that the Governor of Kwangiung resident in this city, got a telegram to-day from the Prefect of Wuchneshalen | slow progress, but at any rate it is something reporting that a division of the rebel army has taken Suchuenbelen, entered Kwanglung prowince near Sinihalen and after capturing Hwachow are advancing on Wechuen city, the surrender of which they demanded to-day. The Prefect states he has no hope of being able to defeat the insurgents and therefore urged the Governor of Kwangtong to immediately despatch | Spanish outposts extend seven or eight miles a gunboat with troops to Wuchuen, which is from the town, along the line of the water-pipes near the coast and only a few hours' steaming from the great reservoir beyond San Juan del from Kwanchow Bay, the harbour in Linchow peninsula recen'ly annexed by la belle France. Why the rebels should harten towards the coast is not very clear unless the Commanderin-Chief, who is said to be a prominent member of the Kolso Hul, deems it a good move to divide his force and thus weaken and bewilder the Imperial forces sent against him from new in Hongkong or thereabout. There is a good deal of uneasiners in this city and if the rebels advance much further East down the West River, there will be a panic and I fear, very serious disorder.

Can it be possible that the British Government is unable to spare one gunboat for the protection of the Shameen? Even the ancient Firebrand would be better than none at all.

It is also reported that some of the rebel commanders are Black Flag officers, while others holding high vank bail from the Tonkin borderlands.

THE "KOLAO" SOCIETY.

As the Kolao Hus is frequently referred to Government documents and in the Chinese dat ly newspapers, and as foreigners as yet know little about the Society, the following brief sketch from a native scholar may be of some service,

The Kolao Has had its origin in the Chinese army. The officers in the army pledged themselves by an oath to form a regiment which, when the Chinese army should meet a strong enemy or fall late great danger, would bring officers and soldiers to the rescue. Thos belonging to this Society would have a special banuer and special uniform so as encourage one another. This was the beginning of this Society. In time however it degenerated and was discouraged by the authorities. But has continued to this day. It secretly sold tickets to get money, professing that those who held such tickets would have special protection until the number in the society was very large

Most of the members are discharged soldiers Formerly pledged to defend their country against rebels and robbers, they have finally official seals, and falso banners, declaring that

The Society was established before the close of the Talping rebellion and spread greatly after the rebellion was put down. During the reigns of Helen Teag and Tung Chib, 1850-1875, the membership was very numerous in Klaugeu Anhul, and Hupeh. The Viceroy Liu in his capacity of Imperial Commissioner of the Nanyang, issued some years ago special instructions to all the magistrates under his jurisdiction that they should issue proclamations to put down the Society. But Test Fayun and Huang Famovement in the district of Faho, in Chekiang by the then Governor Mal, and the false civil and military seals were destroyed. From that

THE SITUATION IN MANILA. (Prom our own Correspondent.)

The situation is not much altered during the past week. The American iroopships are momentarily expected, and pending their arrival the sebels seem to be "marking time." It is all very well for them, but it is killing us with suspense, the weariness of waiting for a climax long delayed, and sure to be excling when it does come. We may all be hunted and killed, by bloodthirsty savages flushed with victory, or by desperate Spaniards filled with unreasoning hate of the Anglo-Saxon; we may be blown to pieces in a bombardment, we may be driven out of house and home to languish in hunger and misery watching the wild tumult of blocd and fire; but we ought not to suffer the prolonged agony of looking daily for our doom, and daily learning that it is to be fo-morrow. When the U.S. squadton destroyed the Spanish ships, it was regarded as a foregone conclusion that Admiral Dewey would forthwith bombard the city, and make an end of the matter at once. Such was said to be his pien when he left Hongkong, two months ago. - Such was the inference drawn by the whole world when bare news of the naval battle was published; in Europe and America everybody said "Manila is by this time in suice." Many papers published pictures of Manila in the act of being reduced to ruins. Truth is stranger than fiction, to such papers. The city is just where it was, intact; but the constitutions of its inhabitants are belog reduced to rulns by the suspense. Murderers condemned to penal servitude sometimes beg for the death penalty as being kinder. I do not beg to be bombarded, but I do wish the climax would climb along quicker, whatever form it is to take, Admiral Dewey was to give the city thirty minutes to capitulate; or take the consequences (in asserted shells, hot or cold). Then it was to be forly-eight hours. Then he would not bombard at all, but troops were coming in three weeks. Then they were to arrive by the end of the month, or the first week in June at the latest, Then the 10th; then the 15th; then the 18th and so on from day to-day nutil now June is all out, and still the troops do not come. Meantime, the Spaniards are also expecting troops-; the Spanish reserve Squadron; with transports and coal steamers, left Cadiz on the 26th of May, and reached Gibraltar by the 16th June, rather i definite.

Meantime the happy-go-lucky style of skismishing continues on the outskirts of Manils. In every direction, it is the same; walk or drive out as far as the houses go, and you find that as soon as the fields, commence, you are among the shooting. In one direction, however, the Monte. All along this route, the rebels are in the woods on each side of the line, and they can at any moment begin a double attack; but somehow they seem to prefer turning their attention in other directions. There is only a little occasional shooting on the waterworks road. whereas I feel sure the rebels could, if they wished, easily rost in from both sides and break the Spanish line, says at San Juan, cutting off the town's water supply. Even if they could not hold San Juan, the mischief would be done and they could retire. The only explanation I can see is that the Filipines are anxious to avoid any possible friction with neutrals; the loss of the water suppuly would be a terrible thing for Manila now, because most of the old wells which were used before the pipes were laid from the hills, are now out of repair and cannot be used again. Even if they could, the population is larger now, and the diseases which were clearly caused by bad water in the old days would break out worse than ever. Of course, river water is out of the question; the Pasig is a stream of liquid mud, with a top-dressing of stray vegetation, sometimes thick enough for a So the loss of the water supply would be a cruel blow to Minils; and my own opinion is that that is just the reason why the rebels hold their hand. They are already going out of their way to ensure for themselves the favourable opinion of foreigners, is several ways; avoiding ail damage to foreign property, welcoming and entertaining all foreigness who wisit their camps, privately notifying foreign residents when a particular subath is going to be attacked. The native leaders know that there are many. Europeans who protest against the idea of letting the Filipines govern themselves, and many even say it is not right for the Americans to employ for in any way ally themselves with a "gang of sayages in so it is prudent to scrupniously avoid as is as possible anything which would strengther, the feeling against them, I believe that is why they are leaving the waterworks alone, and also why they are practically doing I nothing now, having carried all before them up to the friege of the town. They could probably drive the Spanisrds within the walls of the citadel at once, but it suits them to adopt a picu which gives time for the Americans to come-If indeed they ever will really come ! Aguinaldo could now rush right into the town, but it would lead to a lot of damage in the town, and probably the death of many non-combatants; so he is taking a more deliberate course, to avoid that as much as possible. He has about sixty field-guns, of different sorts, captured at different times from the Spaniards, He has avoided bringing them to Manila until now, because he has been able to do all he wanted without them, and in fact the robels have only dised artillery on two or three occasions in the provinces. But he is now moving his guns along towards Manile, from the south, some become rebels and robbers themselves. from Imus, some from Cavite, some from are excerable—enough in themselves to prove they have power of life and death and the right | Spain's unfilners to sule. I have travelled a good deal, and I never saw a place with worse roads. Even China has a fairly good road here and there:

When the rabel artillery is all assembled, which will probably be a week bence, there is to be a concerted attack, not on the town full of anxious neutrals, but on the principal Spanish dorlifications outside, so ss.to rush them into the citadel, and then have them boxed up apart from neutrals. It is a pretty plan, and will probably succeed, without any damage except in the immediate vicinity of the posts to be suched. These are three, one south and two east of the city; the north being the business querter, the eastest prey, but the part which the set els seem to studiously svoid. The southern on post is the fort and powder magazine at Malate; the fort is an antique stone enclosure shout too yards square, with five cannon, old but still vigorous, to judge by the noise they make every night and all night leng. At the time he wrote that Singapore had every advantagegeographical and local-an excellent herbour, capital facilities for defence to shipping, and a port in the direct track of the China trade, while every ship passing through the Straits must ge within balf a mile of it. All he foretold had been fully realized. The lecturer rent on to give an account of the condition of the Malay Penin suls in 1874, when it was determined that the internal struggles which were then paralysing trade in the western States and decimating the population had become a serious danger to neighbouring British settlements, and showed that it must be a rebel shell; but after excelully by statistics what improvements were brought shout by British interference. The cardinal feature of interest in the story was the means by which all piracy and land-fighting was absolutely stamped out; by which taxation was almost the river, north east of Santa Ana. San Juan shollshed, slavery suppressed, justice done, roads and railways constructed, prisons and hospitals built and maintained, and, above all, The third Spinish position of importance is the chiefs reconciled to the new life and the recognition, of equality of all races and classes before the law. Not by wars involving the slaughter of native races, not by drafts upon the Imperial Exchequer, not by agency of chartered companies that necessarily sought their own interests first, was the development of the Malay States attained. Their present seace and marwellous advance in prosperity were due to a sympathetic administration that dealt tenderly with native prejudices and sought to lead upward m free people instead of forcibly delving a subject race. The example and success of Stamford Rifflis should be an encouragement at the present juncture, for he showed what could be done picul. of our share of China greater difficulties would assuredly arise. No one Power could monopolize the trade of an opened-out China, and there was room for all. If we did not maintain our present proportion of the whole trade of China it did not follow we should not gain enermously, for that whole trade was but a fraction of what the fu uto would bring. It, as the tectures fully halleved, we'should keep our full share of future commercial advantages it would be due in great measure to the wisdom and foresight of Sir Stamford Raffles, who in Singapore secured for us the great gate of one of the most important trade routes in the world.

THE TRADE OF SHASHI.

Acting-Consul W. T. Clennell, writing to the Foreign Office on the trade of Shashi, says those who have been enthusiastic in urging the opening of Shashi as a likely centre for import trade in the hands of foreigners seem to have overlooked the somewhat obvious consideration that the town has a " back door," being in ready communication with Hankow by several canals, The principal canal, called at its Shashi end the Pien Ho, affords advantages to the Chinese importer which steamers cannot for a long time hope to rival. Canal junks may be hirod or chartered any day. They awalt the convenience of the shipper instead of obliging him to ship at times which may not sult him. They remain at his disposal for whatever period he bargains for. They are sufficiently numerous for competition to keep down freights. Although the time they occupy on the journey varies from four or five days to to days or more, this is no hardship at a port where there is cometimes no steamer for a week. Mr. Clennell has known the so that a favourable Canal journey takes less time than an unfavorable steamer journey." Freights are light and although the shipper has to sun the gauntlet of several taxing stations, of the Field to Carlell, Drake's lieutenant. At Salgon, their levies do not suffice to make him-after his established practice. As junks may be detained on serival at their destination where a steamer would probably be turned sound at orce, he saves in godown hire. The canel, moreover, is shorter than the river by s me to or 70 miles, and is comparatively free from the dangers and delays to navigation caused by the varying conditions of steam and weather upon the Yangize. Add to these considerations the inveterate conservation of the Chinese, and the reason why the canal route is preferred becomes sufficiently obvious. As a mat'er of feet foreign goods are very largely a walk through the main streets will show a host of small Tapanese cotton goods and lancy articles, milk, fruits, and sauces, English rugs and blackets (worth many times the ree Halkwan clocks and watches (in at least a dozen shops), coloured wool, medicines, spirits of wine santonine tablets, cigars, and a little foreign smoking tobarco (bird's eye) The chief dealers in such goods are Cantonese shop-keepers, most of them not long ostablished in the town. As will have been already inferred, the native goods brought by canni far exceed, in value and quantity, those of foreign origin

CONQUEROR SAMPSON.

THE AME ICAN SIMPSON THE COUNTERPART OF DRAKE'S NAMOUS CAPTAIN.

It is a somewhat strange colucidence that the name of the admiral commanding the main funk journey take a few hours over three days. | United States fiet in the West Indies should be identical with that of the Captain Sampson who was one of Sir Francis Drake's most famous captains, and who in 1586 acted as Corporal the conquest of Bayona he was despatched to the Governor to present Diske's formal demands and subsequently upon it being discovered from the prisoners that certain English sailors had been detained at Vigo, was detailed with a party of sailors to attack the town and after defeating 200 Spinlards with considerable loss successfully accomplish-his mission, returning to the inshare squadron with loot valued by the Spanlards at 30,000 ducate.

Again, on November 16, before Santiago, he landed with Carlell, who was in command of 1,000 men, in the evening of that day, and by the morning the troops found themselves within sold in Shashi. Statistics are unobtainable, but two miles of the position to be attacked, when, upoa a general advance being made, it was discovered that the works were not protected, Staffordibite pottery, Sheffield, German, and and the position was thereupon entered, Samp-American cutlery, English candles, French and son and another officer, being detailed with English soap, Paglish, Japanese, and Italian, a "forlorn" of 30 musketeers to climb down to umbrellas, preserves, sweets, condiments, tinned the town to reconnoitre. The town was deserted, and, accordingly, unoccupied, and held at a ransom. On the 26th, preparations were made tacls entered in the customs returns), Japanese for disembarkment, but first, Sampson, with two and other lamps, German, American, and other | companies, was despatched in Hawkins' gaillot and two pinnaces to Porto Prays, to search for hidden treasure. Again, at Cartagena, on February 6, Sampson picket to pass round and regain the town, but this space, however, had been closed with large wine pipes filled with earth piled on top of one another; extending from the end of the entrenchments right out to the sea. Carlell readily recognised that neither the gons of the galleys nor of the entrenchments could be brought to bear upon this particular spot, and he accordingly at once decided to make his assault there. Goring's musketeers were advanced and on their de ivering a volley in the Spaniards' faces Sampson at the head of his men passed through their ranks and came to push of pike, and after a desperate struggle, in which Sampson was wounded, an entry was made and the entrenchments wen. Sampson again figures as Drake's Lieutenant-Colorel on April 24, 11503, in his attack upon Corunns, where the idea was to crealade two points of the isthmus wall supported by a boat attack from the harbor. At the west end of the isthmus Captain Richard Wingfield (Norrey's Lieutenant-Colonel) and Captain Sampson (Drake's Lieutenant-Colonel) were told off with "forlorn" of 500 men to endeavour at low tide to repeat the successful mancouvre in which Sampson had played so conspicuous a part at Cartagena three years before. The water, however, at the end of the wall was too deep and the IM THE MATTER OF THE COMPANIES force had to proceed by "escalada," when they were thrice driven back, and it was not until the boat parties took the defenders in reverse that an entry was effected.

Apart from similarity of name it is possible that the two are related, but in any case exemplifies the close associations existing between the Anglo-Saxon races.
